

The 14 Infantry Division shoulder patch. (Raffaele Ruggeri)

After the Indian capture of Phillora on 11 September there was a further lull in the battle; I Corps renewed its offensive, aiming to capture Chawinda on 14 September. Both 1 Armoured Division and 6 Mountain Division attempted to capture the city, but neither was successful. By this time, Pakistan had moved 4 Armoured Brigade from Khem Karan into this sector and the opposing forces were almost evenly matched. Even so, India's I Corps succeeded in capturing Jassoran and Batur Dograndi on 16 September. Another effort by I Corps to capture Chawinda on the night of 18/19 September met with only limited success, but Dunn's corps succeeded in capturing about 466 square kilometres of Pakistani territory and destroying or capturing 180 enemy tanks.

Closing actions

India opened a third front by launching 30 Infantry Brigade (11 Infantry Division) on the Barmer–Hyderabad axis. The brigade captured Gadra on 8 September and drove back Pakistani forces from many areas in the sector. Raids and limited actions continued until the end of the war.

Hostilities between India and Pakistan ended after diplomatic intervention by the Soviet Union and the United States, and the subsequent issuance of the Tashkent Declaration (10 January 1966), leading to the disengagement of forces and their withdrawal to positions occupied before