Operating between Dera Baba Nanak and Ganga Nagar, XI Corps also made gains, including 15 Infantry Division's capture of Dera Baba Nanak on 6 December. On 3 December, Pakistan's 106 Infantry Brigade attacked the Hussainiwala enclave and established a foothold there. Faced with the threat of Pakistani armour moving towards Ferozepur, the Indians demolished the Hussainiwala Canal bridge and withdrew. In the Fazilka sector, Pakistani forces captured the Beriwala bridge on the Sabuna distributary, a water obstacle held by 3 ASSAM. Indian units launched several counter-attacks but were unable to evict the Pakistanis, though they were able to contain them.

In the Rajasthan sector, 11 and 12 Infantry divisions carried out thrusts on the Barmer–Naya Chor axis and the Longewala–Rahim Yar Khan axis respectively. On 3 December, Pakistan's 18 Infantry Division launched an attack in the Longewala sector. Supported by the IAF, a company of 23 PUNJAB blunted this thrust, destroying 24 Pakistani tanks and 150 other vehicles. Further south, 11 Infantry Division overran Pakistani border posts on 4 December and advanced 45km into Pakistan, making contact with the Naya Chor defences on 11 December. Raids conducted by 10 PARA (Cdo) also assisted the Indian advance, but before the attack on Naya Chor could materialize, the ceasefire had come into effect. As the battles continued in the west, the war in the east ended with the unconditional surrender of 93,000 Pakistani troops at 1631hrs on 16 December. Thereafter, India announced a unilateral ceasefire effective from 2000hrs on 17 December.
