

The 3 Infantry Division shoulder patch. (Raffaele Ruggeri)

With local efforts failing to deliver results, 70 Infantry Brigade was made responsible for the Batalik sub-sector; 56 Infantry Brigade took over the Dras sub-sector, 79 Infantry Brigade moved into Mushkoh and 192 Infantry Brigade to Dras. Also, HQ 8 Mountain Division moved into the Dras sub-sector to take over major operations from 3 Infantry Division.

In the Mushkoh sector, the Tololing complex including Tololing Top and Point 5140 was the closest set of heights captured by the Pakistanis. Along with Tiger Hill, about 5,000m to the west, it offered a commanding view of the NH-1A, and recapturing it was important as doing so could allow India to get a foothold in the enemy's defensive layout and then clear the other intrusions. Early attempts by 56 Infantry Brigade to reclaim Tololing failed, however, with 1 NAGA and 8 SIKH losing over 140 men in the process. After these reverses, 56 Infantry Brigade was moved to Dras and 18 GRENADIERS relocated from the Kashmir Valley followed by 18 GARH RIF.