

Indian Army troops move towards a forward position in the Dras sub-sector of Kashmir, 29 June 1999. The Indian Army was taken by surprise by Pakistani fighters in 1999 and faced a difficult task in evicting the intruders. There was a shortage of arms and ammunition needed to fight the battles at high altitude, forcing the then Chief of Army Staff, General Ved Prakash Malik, to say: 'We will fight with what we have.'
