CONCLUSION

The most recent war between India and Pakistan may have been in the closing year of the last millennium, but the Indian Army continues to carry out counter-insurgency operations and was involved in a stand-off with China in 2020. What stands out in all the Army's operations is the very high quality of junior leadership and bravery of the soldiers. If on the odd occasion the Army faced a setback, it was only because of the failure of higher leadership.

The Indian Army is one of the most battle-hardened and formidable armies in the world and has repeatedly delivered beyond expectations even when fighting against the odds, in inhospitable terrain against better-equipped armies. The coming years will be no different as the Army remains ready to face any future challenge.
