recycled into new.' In March 2018, for example, a sale of 680 km of roads fetched ₹97 billion.[105] Most experts, however, believe that the big infrastructural push will depend significantly on private investment. Road Transport Minister Nitin Gadkari focused on a hybrid annuity model after 2015, wherein projects are guaranteed 40 per cent of payments annually on completing targets, and private players must raise the remaining funds themselves. Yet, raising private capital from the banks was proving to be a struggle as of early 2020.[106]

Figure 10.13: Infrastructure Allocations in Modi Government Budgets (2018-19 to 2020-21)

Source: Past budgets analysis on infrastructure spending by India Today, 2020[104]

Figure 10.14: Modi Government Focused Heavily on Building Highways: Highways Constructed per km 2009-18