1971: Wanchoo Committee, set up by the Indira Gandhi government, unanimously recommends demonetisation as a measure to end black money.

22 April 1971: West Bengal Pradesh Congress Committee passes resolution demanding demonetisation.

9 October 1971: Group of 100 AICC members demand demonetisation.

18 November 1972: Jan Sangh passes economic resolution demanding demonetisation.

16 July 1973: Jan Sangh Council again passes resolution demanding demonetisation.

1 August 1973: Future prime minister Chandra Shekhar, then a Congress MP, demands demonetisation.

12 August 1973: Rumours of demonetisation cause panic selling of notes in Delhi and a spike in gold prices. Finance Minister Y.B. Chavan publicly denies plans for demonetisation.

V. The Emergency, Janata Party Merger and Break-up

1977: Jan Sangh merges into the Janata Party, with four other Opposition parties, in response to Indira Gandhi's declaration of Emergency in 1975.

22 March–4 July 1977: RSS banned during Emergency.

16 January 1978: The Janata Party government, which includes erstwhile Jan Sangh members as ministers, demonetises ₹1,000, ₹5,000 and ₹10,000 notes.

23 July 1978: Indira Gandhi, now in opposition, alleges selective leaks of demonetisation news to 'certain private banks' prior to announcement for commercial benefits.

30 July 1979: Janata Party bans its members from having membership of 'any organisation having faith in a theocratic state'.

28 February 1980: Janata Party's Jagjivan Ram announces he would 'not leave' the RSS 'dual membership issue' undecided and would 'pursue it to the end'.