

When Akbar lay dying, Khurram refused to leave his bedside. Nine days after Akbar's death, Khurram's father was proclaimed emperor in the Red Fort at Agra. He took the name Jahangir, which means "Seizer of the World."

The Red Fort

Akbar was a great builder. In Agra he built the enormous Red Fort. It served as a palace, a government building, and living quarters for the ruler's family and courtiers. It was one and a half miles around its double walls. Akbar showed off his strength by running around