it holding a man under each arm. Here he held court and took petitions from his subjects. One of his ministers wrote, "A castle of red sandstone, the like of which no traveler has ever seen, has been created by the emperor. The fort alone contains five hundred wonderful stone buildings."

Thousands of people lived here, as well as animals such as elephants, lions, and camels. The fort would also play an important role in the lives of both Shah Jahan and Mumtaz Mahal.

Khurram continued with his education and training. He showed great talent in the skills of war, the arts, and architecture. But when he was fifteen, his life changed.

What happened?

He met a girl and fell in love.