

The bride was asked if she agreed to the marriage. She gave her consent, and the families exchanged gifts. Khurram rinsed his hands in rosewater and drank water to show that he, too, agreed to the marriage. Khurram gave his bride the title Mumtaz Mahal, which means “Chosen One of the Palace.” The feasting, with gala parades and fireworks, went on for a month.

It was just the beginning of a wonderful life together.