

Returning home, he declared a time of mourning, when everyone had to grieve for Mumtaz. It lasted two years. Almost everyone wore white during that time. Music, perfume, cosmetics, jewelry, and colorful clothing were forbidden. Anyone who didn’t abide by these rules could be put to death.