

Drainage pipes and channels were installed. They were encased in stone and mortar. There may be more than a thousand such pipes in the foundation. Then the entire foundation was filled with stone to bring it up to ground level.

Architects began designing the tomb at once. Shah Jahan brought artists and master builders from all over Asia. There is no one person who gets credit for designing the Taj Mahal. Shah Jahan was himself interested in architecture, and he probably supervised the entire project.