

A European priest who visited Agra wrote, “[Blocks of white marble] had been brought there from over forty leagues away. . . . Some of these blocks, which I met on the way . . . were of such unusual size and length that they drew the sweat of many powerful teams of oxen and of fierce-looking, big-horned buffaloes, which were dragging enormous, strongly made wagons, in teams of twenty or thirty animals.”

At that time, construction workers climbed scaffolds made of bamboo to do their jobs. Because the stone for the tomb was so heavy, this scaffold had to be made of bricks.
