

When the construction project was completed, Shah Jahan was told it would take five years to take apart the scaffold. Instead he offered the bricks to anyone who would take them. They disappeared overnight.