Many people gathered for the Urs. A British diplomat wrote, “All the face of the earth, so far as we could see, was covered with people, troops of horses, elephants with innumerable flags . . . which made a most gallant show.”

Shah Jahan appeared in his white robes of mourning. After listening to prayers, he retired to his private rooms in the Red Fort. He was still grieving.

