

When visitors passed through the entrance gate, they saw the great white dome of the Taj Mahal twice. First, the dome itself, and then its reflection in the pool of water in front. The carefully planned sight was so stunning that people stopped in their tracks to stare at it. Tourists today do the same thing.