farming, but families, including Lhamo's, still tried their best to grow crops. His family grew barley, buckwheat, and potatoes. Before Lhamo was born, the village suffered from a long drought. No rain had fallen in years, and hail had destroyed the plants in the fields. Many villagers were starving.

Buddhism

Buddhism is a religion founded by Siddhartha Gautama. This prince lived sometime between the sixth and fourth centuries BC in northern India. He was known as Buddha.

Buddha gave up a royal life to search for enlightenment, or Nirvana. Enlightenment is complete happiness and goodness and an end to suffering. Buddha taught others how to find this peace within themselves. After Buddha died, his followers continued to practice his lessons.
