It was very snowy on the day the group arrived. The men pretended to be travelers and asked for shelter. Diki, with her compassionate spirit, welcomed them; fed them tea, bread, and dried meat; and let them stay overnight. The family did not know that their visitors were on a mission to find the Dalai Lama.

