CHAPTER 3
Journey to the Throne

A large caravan (a group of travelers) set out from the Amdo region in July 1939 for the three-month journey to Lhasa. It was made up of about fifty people, including Lhamo's parents, his brothers Gyalo and Lobsang, lots of supplies, and more than three hundred yaks, camels, horses, and mules. There were no cars to ride in or roads to follow. They trekked along rough caravan routes, on foot or on the backs of the animals, through
