

The group was headed to India, on Tibet's southern border. India's prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, hadn't supported Tibet in the past. But maybe now that things were worse, he might be willing to help. The Dalai Lama hoped India would be a safe home for him and all the people fleeing the country with him.

Jawaharlal Nehru (1889–1964)

Jawaharlal Nehru was born in Allahabad, India.

He worked closely with Mahatma Gandhi to help free India from British rule. In 1947, India became independent, and Nehru was named its first prime minister.

As prime minister, he worked to give the people a voice in their government, to help the poor, and to promote education for all Indians.