

He also wanted to protect the Tibetan traditions that the Chinese had tried to destroy. So, soon after he arrived, he established a school where students could learn Tibetan dance and music and a university where they could study Buddhist teachings.