

The Dalai Lama was a playful child in a country whose high, snow-capped mountains and peaceful way of life had kept it separate from the rest of the world. Once he was discovered to be the reincarnation of the Dalai Lama, he grew to become a leader who helped his country through its most difficult times. His people worshipped him, even when he had to flee the country to survive. He went on to become a worldwide celebrity.

People admire the Dalai Lama because of his gentle, friendly, and compassionate manner. Different religious leaders support him because he believes that everyone, no matter their religion, should work together to protect one another's human rights. Through all the attention, he is always humble. "I am no one special," he has said.

But he is very special. He is special to the Tibetans whom he has fought so hard to protect. He is a role model of compassion for all people. And he is still as friendly and curious as he was when he was a child. "I laugh
