

Gandhi urged Indians throughout South Africa to practice nonviolence as well. Strikes, or refusals to work, were a peaceful way to stand up against unfairness in the workplace. Gandhi organized a strike of Indian coal miners. Many of them were put in jail for refusing to work, but they did not use violence. Gandhi had shown the lawmakers that Indians were willing to take action against unfair treatment.

APARTHEID IN SOUTH AFRICA

INDIANS WERE NOT THE ONLY NONWHITE GROUP THAT FACED DISCRIMINATION IN SOUTH AFRICA. A SMALL WHITE MINORITY OF THE POPULATION WIELDED POWER OVER AN ENORMOUSLY LARGER BLACK AFRICAN POPULATION.

IN 1948, THE GOVERNMENT RULED THAT ALL RACES-WHITE, BLACK, INDIAN, AND COLORED (MIXED RACE)-HAD TO KEEP SEPARATE FROM EACH OTHER UNDER THE LAWS OF APARTHEID. APARTHEID MEANS SEPARATENESS IN THE AFRIKAANS LANGUAGE. PEOPLE OF DIFFERENT RACES COULD
