boundary. When they finish, they have more than a wal . It is the goal that makes the difference. Do not make rocketry your profession, your livelihood— make it your religion, your mission." Did I see something of Prof. Vikram Sarabhai in von Braun? It made me happy to think so.

With three deaths in the family in as many successive years, I needed total commitment to my work in order to keep performing. I wanted to throw al my being into the creation of the SLV. I felt as if I had discovered the path I was meant to fol ow, God's mission for me and my purpose on His earth. During this period, it was as though I had pushed a hold button—no badminton in the evenings, no more weekends or holidays, no family, no relations, not even any friends outside the SLV circle.

To succeed in your mission, you must have single-minded devotion to your goal. Individuals like myself are often cal ed 'workaholics'. I question this term because that implies a pathological condition or an il ness. If I do that which I desire more than anything else in the world and which makes me happy, such work can never be an aberration. Words from the twenty-sixth Psalm come to mind while I work: "Examine me, O Lord, and prove me."
