There were loud celebrations in the changing room after the game, I can tell you that much. My Indian teammates might be frustratingly quiet on the field, but put a trophy in their hands and the celebrations are about as loud and as noisy as they get. I don't think I've ever seen guys so happy at winning something in my life.

The Indian guys don't drink much – having said that, Rohit Sharma can put a couple away when he puts his mind to it – and our fines master, Andrew Symonds, showed admirable restraint by getting everyone in the mood without bringing anyone's evening to a premature halt.

Afterwards we all went to a nearby hotel for the official IPL after-party. As with any bash thrown by former IPL supremo Lalit Modi, there was champagne on tap and plenty of the fairer sex in attendance. Good times were had by all …