Funny photo, this. These are the three protagonists at the heart of the Duckworth-Lewis debacle at the 2003 World Cup: coach Eric Simons (left), captain Shaun Pollock (middle) and Mark Boucher (right). I felt for Bouch – he received the wrong instructions. Polly was a decent captain, though – just don't cock up in the field when he's bowling. Ja, big-time sense-of-humour failure then!

With Graeme Smith. Smithy and I have had our ups and downs, but you've got to give the guy credit. He took on the job pretty young and has improved a lot as a captain
