players, while the rest of his teammates are sitting in the comfort of the changing room. And let's not forget Herschelle's exceptional wit and humour. There was never a dull moment with Hersch around, and he always kept us well entertained when we were on the road.

I don't know when Herschelle will decide to retire, but I will make sure I'm at Newlands when he makes that decision to play one last innings at his favourite ground. I'm certain he will still be at backward point looking for the opportunity to take a great catch or hit the stumps. I'm also sure he will make every effort to entertain his loyal Cape Town fans with bat in hand and remind us of the stroke-making that turned him into one of the world's great batsmen.

Thanks, Hersch, for the great memories!
