Acknowledgements

This book began and was seen through to the end with the encouragement and skill of Nandini Mehta at Juggernaut. So my greatest thanks are to her. She is not responsible for what is in its pages beyond the usual editorial comments and suggestions, but she insisted on a more personalized, informal book than an academic would usually write and the final product bears the imprint of her thought. I also want to thank others at Juggernaut who reacted to the original outline of the book including Chiki Sarkar – I didn't deliver on the long list of topics I began with, but I hope that this more focused account of India–China relations goes some way towards what they wanted. Finally, Jaishree Ram Mohan saw the manuscript to completion with her careful editing and patience, and so my deep thanks to her as well.

The book is dedicated to my children and extended family, but I also want to record my gratitude to them. Over the years, they have been wonderfully supportive, urging me to write something longer than I usually do. I finally did, partly out of my great affection for them. The book was done quickly, as this Juggernaut series requires, and it was done in the middle of a semi-lockdown in Singapore due to the Covid pandemic. Regular Zoom and other conversations with the Bajpai clan helped me to 'grin and bear it' and keep writing.

I also want to record my thanks to Dean Danny Quah and Vice Deans Suzaina Kadir and Yuen Foong Khong at the Lee Kuan Yew School, National University of Singapore, for giving me a semester-long break from teaching in order to write the book. My previous Dean, Kishore Mahbubani, brought me to the School to think and write about India–China relations. Kishore kept pushing me along on the project, and I have tried to 'deliver'.
