

Figure 2.11 Taiwara-Farah Rud. © Photograph Warwick Ball, c. 1970s.

Figure 2.12 Ahangaran. © Photograph Warwick Ball, c. 1970s.

bandry, small-scale farming, and the production of portable commodities. Transhumant rather than nomadic segments of the population – for example, the inhabitants of Ahangaran in northern Ghur, of whom the above-mentioned Firozkohis might be descendants – could have established settlements for seasonal occupation during specific periods of the year (Figures 2.1 and 2.3). Moreover, the specialized expertise required in erecting relatively portable winter dwellings, such as yurts, appears not to be endemic to transhumant groups, but rather the latter purchase it from skilled crafters, and that only where these workers are available. In fact – and insofar as modern praxes reflect historical ones – even these artisans'