

Figure 2.14 Southern Ghur, southeast façade of a structure. From Herberg 1982: fig. 9.

mentation, Herberg described these structures as thickly plastered on the exterior, with many having decoration incised or molded on their surfaces while the plaster was still wet.[48]

The decorative motifs on central–southern Ghur's remains evince some