90. The reputation of the Ghaznavids appears to have been founded largely on their India campaigns, which served multiple purposes such as gaining public admiration and the support of the Abbasid khalifa at Baghdad, in turn further spreading the dynasty's renown. Cf. Bosworth 1966: 87ff. Recent analyses of the textual sources reporting events during Ghaznavid ascendancy have underscored the multiple motivations behind the India campaigns, emphasizing that facticity was less the authors' goal than communicating the polyvalent meanings of these campaigns in their own time. Cf. Anooshahr 2006; Anooshahr 2018a.