

The Executive Committee of the National Security Council, a group of advisers to the president, began deliberations about the crisis on October 16, 1962. Its members are shown here at a session on October 29. Their discussions were secretly recorded by JFK—a breach of trust but a boon to historians. (JFK LIBRARY)