

As Kennedy and Khrushchev reached a deal to resolve the crisis on October 28, Castro rebelled against his Soviet ally and refused to allow US or UN inspection of the missile sites in Cuba. Khrushchev tried in vain to bully his unruly client into submission. The two are shown here during Castro's 1963 visit to the USSR, Khrushchev's attempt to restore relations. To Castro's left is the Soviet ambassador to Cuba, Aleksandr Alekseev, a former KGB resident there. (ZUMA PRESS, INC. / ALAMY STOCK PHOTO)
