‘The Radicalization of Sunni Conservative Fundamentalism,’ ISIM Newsletter, no. 2 (Mar. 1999).

47. The Sunni-Shia divide in Islam began following the death of the Prophet Mohammad in 632 CE when his followers split over his successor. Shia Muslims believe that the caliphate should have been passed down only to the Prophet’s direct descendants and therefore the Prophet’s son-in-law (and cousin) Ali ibn Abi Talib should have succeeded him. Instead, three other men preceded Ali. Sunnis supported the ascension of his predecessors and consider Ali to be the fourth and last of the ‘rightly guided caliphs.’
