terrorism in Punjab as the TTP was facing pressure due to army operations. Qari Abdul Majeed, alias Qari Zafar, alias Qari Abu Kahafa was appointed the Ameer of Punjab Chapter.[2] They decided to attack the offices of security forces, intelligence agencies, police, police stations, tombs of Sufis, imambargahs and processions of Shi'a.

The TTP formed sub-groups for terrorist activities in Punjab, some of which are as follows:

1. Ghazi Force: It was tasked to avenge the attack on Lal Masjid, Islamabad by carrying out terrorist attacks throughout Pakistan, especially in Rawalpindi/Islamabad. Commander Hilal r/o Orakzai Agency was nominated as in-charge.
2. Basra Force: It was named after the dreaded leader of Lashkar-e-Jhangvi, Riaz Basra, who was killed in an encounter in 2002. Its aim was to avenge the death of Riaz Basra by carrying out terrorist activities in Rawalpindi/Islamabad. Commander Haroon was appointed as the commander in charge of this group.
3. Junood-e-Hafsa Force: It was formed to avenge the death of female students killed in the Lal Masjid operation. Qari Asmatullah Muavia, alias Saad r/o Khanewal was appointed the Amir of this force.
4. Siraiki Karwan: It was formed to carry out terrorist activities in southern Punjab. Muhammad Hanif Gabol, alias Muavia was appointed the commander of this force. He was linked with Sipah-e-Sahaba.

In 2009–10, Punjab faced the worst terrorist attacks. All those mentioned in the meeting of Qari Hussain Mehsud were targeted. In 2010 alone, Lahore faced seven major suicide and gun and grenade attacks, leading to more than 200 deaths and approximately 700 injuries.

In the same year, about 12 low-intensity bomb blasts took place in Lahore, resulting in two deaths and 40 injuries. The army's general headquarters (GHQ) situated in Rawalpindi (Punjab) was attacked by Punjabi Taliban.

In 2011–2, their activities against armed forces became more pronounced. For instance, they attacked twice and killed army men in Gujrat. They also attacked Pakistan Aeronautical Complex, Kamra, and damaged a SAAB reconnaissance aeroplane. All nine attackers, four from Punjab, were killed in the gun battle. More worrying was the