Lahore. Rather it was the bloodiest year. There was a respite in 2011 as 44 suicide bombings were recorded that year, while 16 suicide bombings took place in 2012 until June.

According to the details given in one estimate, 2009 saw the most suicide bombings, with 1,090 people killed and 3,462 injured. The highest number of people killed was 1,153 in 2010, with 58 suicide bombings. According to another analysis and estimate:

> 1,224 people were killed and more than 2,100 wounded in suicide bombings during the year 2010, slightly up from the previous year which was itself a record since Pakistan signed up for the war on terrorism. The number of suicide attacks, by itself, fell by as much as 35 per cent, which means the attacks that took place had a greater strike rate (Mir, 2010).

In 2011, approximately 625 people were killed, while 1,386 got injured. In the first three months of that year, the suicide bombers carried out

Table 5.3 Suicide attacks, deaths and injuries from 2002 to 2017.

Year	No. of suicide attacks	Killed	Injured
2002	1	15	34
2003	2	69	103
2004	7	89	321
2005	4	84	219
2006	7	161	352
2007	54	765	1,677
2008	59	893	1,846
2009	76	949	2,356
2010	49	1,167	2,199
2011	41	628	1,183
2012	39	365	607
2013	43	751	1,411
2014	25	336	601
2015	19	161	360
2016	5	44	109
2017	11	211	552
Total*	442	6,688	13,930

*Data until 30 December 2017.