Table 6.1 Fatalities in terrorist violence in Pakistan from 2003 to 2018.

Year	Civilians	Security force personnel	Terrorists/ insurgents	Total
2003	140	24	25	189
2004	435	184	244	863
2005	430	81	137	648
2006	608	325	538	1,471
2007	1,522	597	1,479	3,598
2008	2,155	654	3,906	6,715
2009	2,324	991	8,389	11,704
2010	1,796	469	5,170	7,435
2011	2,738	765	2,800	6,303
2012	3,007	732	2,472	6,211
2013	3,001	676	1,702	5,379
2014	1,781	533	3,182	5,496
2015	940	339	2,403	3,682
2016	612	293	898	1,803
2017	540	208	512	1,260
2018	9	17	19	45
Total	22,200	6904	33,920	63,024

Source: South Asian Terrorism Portal (SATP).

hired by it to raise funds (The News International, 2008). Initially, TTP had refrained from resorting to violence in Karachi because they wanted to use it for fund raising, recruitment and refuge (Dawn, 2009). But once challenged by the CID, they carried out a number of terrorist attacks in Karachi, including horrendous suicide attacks on the CID office and the residence of its most active officer in 2010 and 2011.

The TTP therefore continued its terrorist activities in different forms, faces and functions in many cities across Pakistan.

Thus, TTP demonstrated its intention and ability to kill at will throughout Pakistan right from its inception. It callously made all endeavours to inflict as many casualties on all sorts of targets as possible, including coreligionists, Pakistanis and civilians. Similarly, TTP killed non-believers and sectarian minorities without compunction. The objective had been to create fear through spectacular terrorist attacks. They did not care for a backlash that could severely damage the organisation, and maintained the appearance of an Islamic group