been the main spokesperson of the TTP, who usually gave statements to the media from 'unknown destination'. Similarly, the spokesperson of the TTP Swat chapter was also quite active before the military operation.

The TTP released a video in 2011 showing the planning of a suicide bombing that devastated the building of the Criminal Investigation Department in Karachi in 2010. It showed three suicide attackers receiving training, filming their target and recording their motives for carrying out the attack (Dawn Editorial, 2011). It also released videos of beheading and killing of kidnapped army and FC personnel by the TTP militants. The grisly footage showing the execution of 15 captured Pakistani policemen by a firing squad was released by the TTP and is available on YouTube. These videos were released by 'Umar Video'. All videos were quite sophisticated as if they were made and edited in proper modern studios. These videos were uploaded on YouTube aimed at creating fear among the public.

TTP also released the video of the daredevil daylight Bannu (KP) jailbreak, in which the armed-to-the-teeth militants secured the release of 384 prisoners on 15 April 2012.

Hakimullah Mehsud, the TTP Chief and his deputy Waliur Rehman were seen in the video briefing 150 TTP militants about the plan to attack the jail. It also showed the footage of militants attacking the jail. They went straight to the cell in the jail, where Adnan Rashid, the former air force official who was involved in plotting the attempt on the life of General Pervez Musharraf, was being held, and secured his release. Adnan Rashid's interview was also included in this video. The 34-minute footage was openly available and for sale in both North and South Waziristan (The News International, 2012). It would have lifted the morale of the militants and their sympathisers, resulting in more dare devil terrorist attacks.

TTP published an Urdu monthly magazine, Nawa-e-Afghan Jihad (Voice of Afghan Jihad), which covered the activities of Afghan and Pakistani Taliban (TTP). The March 2012 issue had 68 pages containing articles on the importance of jihad, Aafia Siddiqui, who was imprisoned in the US, the case of missing persons in the custody of Pakistan's security agencies, the details of Afghan Taliban's activities/successes in Afghanistan, drone attacks and so on. The editorial was quite venomous and provocative. It reproduced a segment of the statement issued by Imaraat-e-Islamia Afghanistan (Islamic Emirate of Afghanistan),
