thereby meaning the Taliban, on the burning of the Holy Qur'an at Bagram Air Base:

> The reaction over the desecration of Holy Qur'an should not be restricted to slogans and public protests only. The centers of occupying forces should be attacked, their convoys should be attacked and their soldiers should be killed. They should be taught a befitting lesson for desecration of the Holy Qur'an.

It also expressed disappointment over the placid reaction of Pakistanis over this incident. In the article 'Those Eleven Prisoners, Abdul Saboor Shaheed and Missing Persons', the Pakistani intelligence agencies especially ISI and MI had been lambasted for unlawfully apprehending many suspects, torturing them and keeping them in illegal confinement for long periods.

Pamphleteering was also an effective tool of communication employed by the terrorists, especially in Waziristan. On the first death anniversary of Osama bin Laden, the militants in North Waziristan distributed pamphlets in Miramshah to pledge to continue jihad. It stated that:

> Let us pledge today that we will continue our jihad and sacrifice our lives and property in the way of Allah like Sheikh Osama did. Today, a year since Sheikh Osama bin Laden embraced martyrdom the enemy America is repenting. It is facing defeat and Pakistan' future is also bleak.

It was in Pashto and Urdu. It was distributed by armed men openly in the streets of Miramshah. Only two days before this distribution, there was a bloody skirmish between the militants and the troops, which resulted in the death of 19 soldiers and civilians (Roggio, 2012).

TTP and Al Qaeda used media and the internet quite deftly and persistently to propel their interests and exert influence across Pakistan. The aim was to influence a large segment of people and to prepare them for the transformation of society through brute force and the barrel of the gun as envisioned by them. The emphasis was on creating mistrust against the government and its armed forces. Their strategy of liberally using (misusing) Qur'anic verses and Prophet Muhammad's sayings to
