Police; at the HQ, there was a Deputy Inspector General (DIC) and five Senior Superintendents of Police (SSP) who dealt with operations, analysis, technical, administration and investigation.

One good thing done by CTD Punjab was the initiation of a deradicalisation project where about 200 terrorists were given vocational training to enable them to start their life afresh. They were trained with the help of TEVTA. However, it soon paled into inactivity and became dormant.

From 2015, at times, the CTD Punjab acted proactively and took the terrorists head on. Especially after the killing of Home Minister Punjab, Col® Shuja Khanzada, at his residence by a suicide bomber, CTD chased and neutralised terrorists and their facilitators belonging to LeJ, Al Qaeda and IS (Daesh).

Conversely, the CID Karachi showed courage and seriousness to take action against TTP. It arrested a number of TTP terrorists and recovered arms and ammunition from them. Its officers faced the retaliatory attacks of TTP, but they remained undeterred. Senior Superintendent of Police (SSP) Chaudhry Aslam's residence was targeted with VBIED. His house was totally destroyed; however, he and his family remained unhurt. But later on, he was ambushed and killed by the terrorists.

Police

Police entered the arena of countering terrorism rather reluctantly, although it is the first agency that comes into contact with the terrorists. It not only felt that countering terrorism was not its job, but also it was ill-equipped and poorly trained to face well-armed and determined terrorists. It was trained to fight against crime, control riots, investigate and deal with other law and order situations, but not terrorists. However, the approach changed over a period of time because it had to face the terrorists in urban centres. The arrival of die-hard, ready-to-die terrorists and suicide bombers was a new and strange phenomenon for the police. They were neither trained nor equipped for this job.

Talat Masood, a military analyst, said that the government had been slow to train and equip the police for a wave of attacks (Daily Times, 10 July 2009). Even the Punjab Police performed poorly during the terrorist attack on the Sri Lankan cricket team in Lahore (Dawn, 2009). In 2011 and 2012, several efforts were made for capacity building of