From 2001 to 2015, Pakistan had incurred $106.98 billion (Rs 8.7 trillion) in direct and indirect costs owing to terrorism. The cost was worked out by an inter-ministerial committee, having representation of Ministries of Finance, Interior, Foreign Affairs and a Joint Ministerial Group (see Table 9.1).

According to the fresh fact sheet launched by the government of Pakistan in January 2018, terrorism killed more than 74,000 people over the last 14 years and resulted in economic losses of $123 billion (Dawn, Jan 9, 2018).

SOCIAL, CULTURAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL FALLOUTS

According to a doctor from KP, every second person in Waziristan suffered from depression. Stress emerged as a new sociological phenomenon in insurgency-hit areas.[1] Studies showed that bombings caused the severest Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) compared to other traumas.[2] Psychiatrist Mian Iftikhar Hussain at the Sarhad Hospital for Psychiatric
