2. Punjab Police sources.
3. Interview with Maulana Mujibur Rahman Inqalabi, former Information Secretary, Defunct Sipah-e-Sahaba Pakistan (SSP) on 26 June 2010.
4. My repeated conversations with Maulana Azam Tariq in 2003.
5. Interview with Maulana Mujibur Rahman Inqalabi, former Information Secretary, Defunct Sipah-e-Sahaba Pakistan (SSP) on 26 June 2010.
6. Masood Sharif Khan Khattak, former Director General Intelligence Bureau, Pakistan, was one of the most important persons involved in the Karachi Operation with the direct supervision of PM Benazir Bhutto and Interior Minister Major General Naseerullah Babar. Years after his retirement, during a conversation at his Islamabad residence, he told me that he was convinced about MQM's Jinnah Pur design. Prior to that, during the Karachi Operation, I met him at his Karachi office and he was convinced about it then also.

Chapter 4 The Rise of Militancy in Pakistan After 2001

1. The Constitution of Pakistan 1973.
2. Interview with Bashir Khan r/o Miran Shah, FATA, Islamabad, 2012. Gunaratna and Nelson (2008) depend on the 'Theory of norm dynamics' to argue that 'most of the Al Qaeda affiliated groups shared a similar experience during the Afghan–Soviet war or training in Afghanistan camps'. This experience and network, coupled with a sense of belonging to the same Pashtun tribe, gave rise to the norm of 'Talibanisation' in FATA.
3. Pakistan Intelligence source.
4. The Theory of Relative Deprivation helps us understand that the perception of relative deprivation, when the gap between expectations and satisfaction is growing rapidly, is the basic condition for participation in collective civil violence and terrorism.
5. In fact, there are several unregistered madrasahs. Ironically, there are at least 83 illegally constructed madrasahs and mosques in the capital of Pakistan, Islamabad, alone. The government is hesitant to demolish these illegal setups for fear of a Lal Masjid-like backlash.
6. CTD Punjab Estimate.
7. Due to rapid modernisation, inequality theory and rapid economic modernisation measured as GDP growth makes societies more exposed to
