among survivors of the Oklahoma City bombing', Journal of the American Medical Association 282/8 (25 August 1999), p. 761.

3. Malala Yousafzai raised her voice and championed the cause for the people of Swat against the sufferings and the cruel act of TTP. She lived in Mingora Swat, which was under control of Maulvi Fazlullah and his militants. They were destroying schools and beheading people. At that time, Malala started writing a diary for the BBC with the pseudonym Gul Makai, in which she exposed the brutalities of TTP. She was nominated for the International Children Peace Award. The government of Pakistan conferred on her 'Sitara-e-Jurat' (Star of gallantry).
4. Interview with a former TTP militant.
5. Gated colonies are residential areas that are enclosed within a boundary wall. In areas such as Islamabad, Rawalpindi, Peshawar and Lahore, these localities are located near the city centre. In Karachi, they are located mostly on the outskirts of the city. The value of property in gated communities is approximately 12–15 per cent more than the value of the property in nearby areas. Information provided by Citi Associates Karachi, Shah Estate Agency Lahore and Tariq Khan and Sons, Islamabad, to DAWN, 9 September 2012. Jamil Chaudhry of Jamil Brothers Contractors, Lahore, was also interviewed on 6 September 2012.

8. Maj. General A – Served in ISI – commented on condition of anonymity. Interviewed on 12 March 2012.
9. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the then Prime Minister of Pakistan, is famously quoted to have said, 'We will eat grass but we will make the nuclear bomb.' It was a vow to achieve the goal of going nuke despite debilitated economic conditions in the country. Similarly, when Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif retaliated to the Indian nuclear tests by carrying out nuclear tests at Chagai in Balochistan in May 1998, he anticipated US economic sanctions and urged the masses to brave the adverse conditions for the sake of nuclear capability. People responded positively and enthusiastically.
