up my name on the Lord’s honours board, a part of me wants to ask them whether they can put an asterisk next to this one, a special mention of extenuating circumstances, that I did it on no hours sleep and a fever. When I get back to the hotel, Lola and Ruby are feeling better but, almost more reassuringly, do not know or care what has happened in the cricket either way.