protest with the Al-Aqsa demonstrators. Luckily, up till now, nobody has been killed on either side.

Thursday, April 6

A barrage of rockets was fired from Lebanon during the night; some thirty-four rockets, the heaviest attack since the Second Lebanon War. Iron Dome intercepted most of them. Two people were slightly wounded. Is this a Hezbollah initiative or a Palestinian one? Netanyahu is calling a cabinet meeting for tonight. The Israeli reaction will probably depend on which organization is behind the firing.

From first reports, Palestinian organizations in Lebanon are responsible for firing the rockets, probably with Iranian help. Also, a few mortar shells were fired on Metullah. There is a high probability of a strong Israeli response, both in the North and South. Netanyahu declared at the end of the cabinet meeting: “The internal discussion will not be an obstacle to our response. Our enemies will pay a price.”

The Second Lebanon War was tough. It was initiated by Hezbollah which, in a raid over the Lebanese border, captured 7 Israeli soldiers. In the response that followed and lasted about a month, Israel lost 140 soldiers and Hezbollah about 500; Israeli cities in the North suffered a number of missile attacks; and the Hezbollah fighters, Iranians or trained by Iran, proved very resilient enemies. This time, Hezbollah denies involvement.

I dislike being a military correspondent, although I arrived intending to fight but was exempted when my age was found out. The three years I spent in the army excluded fighting units because of a heart murmur (bicuspid aortic valve) that had been discovered years before but was only identified and operated on forty years later. It shows you that one can live with heart murmurs … I served in the intelligence unit that became the famous Unit