even trickier. See, these very days, the case of the Roger Waters display in Berlin.

Jill Biden, on her visit to the Middle East, will tour Jordan and Egypt, but skip Israel.

Saturday, May 27

Not a day passes without a member of the coalition engineering some provocation. Now MK Ariel Kellner of the Likud has proposed a law concerning Palestinian institutions that would impose heavy taxation on any foreign humanitarian contributions. It has immediately brought sharp protests from the US and all major West European countries. Netanyahu has scheduled an internal meeting for tomorrow.

The law on Palestinian institutions will remain under wraps at this stage, as a result of the international protests.

The twenty-first Saturday of demonstrations in reaction to Netanyahu's declaration, after the budget vote, that the judicial overhaul can now be brought back. Some 80,000 demonstrators in Tel Aviv, and tens of thousands all over the country.

Sunday, May 28

A trove of documents about the Yom Kippur War was published today. The most sensational (although well known) among them was the detailed description, after the events, by Yoel Ben-Porat of how he transmitted, two days before the war, warnings "from the horse's mouth" that "war was imminent," warnings sent to the chief of intelligence and to the head of the Mossad and not transmitted to the political level, Prime Minister Golda Meir and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, nor to Chief of Staff David Elazar.