West Bank militants; the PA will be maintained, but not given special economic assistance.

The public largely disapproves of current policies regarding the judicial overhaul. According to the results of a poll published today, if elections were held now, the Gantz-Lapid opposition would receive sixty-one votes, the coalition only fifty-four votes. It shows that the Jenin operation did not help the PM.

President Herzog criticized the attack against the attorney general and called for a return to discussions under his aegis before any step is taken.

Monday, July 10

The coalition is preparing for a first vote on a measure to repeal most clauses of the plausibility law. Will they postpone the second and third vote and accept Herzog's call for a renewal of talks?

It seems that we received the answer regarding Herzog's urgent proposal: the coalition voted unanimously for a first reading of the plausibility law repeal. Netanyahu informed the president that the coalition would not return to the conciliation talks.

Tuesday, July 11

Huge demonstration at Ben Gurion Airport. Tens of protesters arrested in similar demonstrations around the country, but for the time being the Histadrut isn't ready to call for a general strike.

Wednesday, July 12

On the morrow, the country seems to be returning to normal. How strange. The US is possibly reconsidering its relations with Israel. What could it