New protests are taking place in front of Netanyahu's residence and in front of the American Embassy to bolster the stand of the US administration.

Hundreds of pilots opt for various forms of resistance, and the country's physicians are threatening to strike. But for the time being, essentially nothing has changed and the present stalemate can last for quite some time.

The division of the country has worsened in the last few days: 1,142 pilots and other officers of the air force declared in a letter that they wouldn't report for service if the cancelation of the plausibility law passed a second and third (final) vote next week, as planned by Levin, Rotman, and Netanyahu. The letter said that if the threat is concretized, the air force will not be ready for war. It has rightly been called "an earthquake" by many commentators. I am not sure that it will suffice to stop the passage of the
