Orthodox parties, it seeks to dictate its will. This can happen if the covert messianic drive for the whole of Eretz Israel is not abandoned by a majority. It must be opposed by all legal means. This, for a long time, will be the main task of the rational part of our society, the liberal and democratic segment of it, however small it may be at the outset. But will this segment be able, over time, to maintain the necessary strength and steadfastness to defend its convictions and ideals? Will it go on fighting against constant attempts of an adverse coalition to subvert the freedom of our citizens and endanger the possibility of as humane and just a solution as possible to the conflict with the Palestinians?
