and to the prisoners? Will they be bartered for several thousand Palestinians held in Israeli prisons?

Israel has agreed to let humanitarian aid enter Gaza tomorrow. By an over 90 percent majority, the European Parliament expressed its support for the country's right to defend itself against Hamas. British prime minister Rishi Sunak has arrived. He may not have practical aid to contribute, but he may share with Netanyahu his concerns about the potential massive influx of Gaza refugees the UK may have to face, and also about a further rise in the price of oil, if Iran decides to abandon its relative restraint. But, as I said before, these visits, as well as the European Parliament's vote, are welcome for whatever psychological boost they may provide Israelis.

Tonight, in an address to the nation from the Oval Office, President Biden will reportedly share concrete details of the US financial and military aid for Israel and Ukraine. The aid package will apparently be as large as $100 billion. In the meantime, a US plane with armor-plated jeeps landed at Ben Gurion Airport "to replace those destroyed," according to an official statement. In online comments, somebody asked the right question: how could it be that after just ten days of fighting, the army's armor-plated jeeps have all been destroyed? The answer is simple: as other equipment was found missing, no jeeps were ready …

The evil clown Ben-Gvir declared, in a speech encouraging civilians to acquire arms, that wherever in the Gaza periphery there were armed groups of civilians, these areas incurred smaller losses on October 7. This is pure propaganda, argue survivors: small arms couldn't do much, even a tank in the courtyard couldn't do a thing against hundreds of Hamas assailants. Ben-Gvir, the most despicable member of a despicable coalition, cannot miss an opportunity to say something, as stupid and false as it may be, to remain in the news. He is not alone. Thus the communications minister announced today that Israel would "decrease" Gaza's territory after the war. Did he possibly express the settlers' intention of reinstalling Jewish
